

Home > Industry News > Sheila Bridges brings Harlem Toile pattern to housewares

The Le Creuset ceramic line features Bridges' exuberant vignettes of everyday Black life.

Sheila Bridges brings Harlem Toile pattern to housewares

Allison Zisko // Editor in Chief // September 5, 2023

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Le Creuset has a new Harlem Toile de Jouy collection in partnership with Sheila Bridges. The cookware collection celebrates the rich cultural heritage of one of New York City's most vibrant neighborhoods through Bridges' Harlem Toile de Jouy pattern.

The designs feature Bridges' exuberant vignettes of everyday Black life. The pastoral motifs typical of French toiles are rendered in a crisp black appliqué on Le Creuset white. The designs are featured on Le Creuset's cast iron Signature round Dutch oven, as well as its stoneware pitchers and mugs.

The line has limited availability: it will be sold at Bloomingdale's, Le Creuset Signature Stores and on Le Creuset's website.

"We're honored to partner with Sheila Bridges to bring her iconic Harlem Toile de Jouy pattern into the kitchen with this limited-edition collaboration," said Christopher Scinto, Sr. vice president, marketing & sales at Le Creuset. "Proudly paying homage to an authentic history, this design is intended to pair effortlessly with any Le Creuset color palette."

"The celebration of Black culture through Harlem Toile de Jouy is very meaningful to me, and I'm thrilled to partner with Le Creuset to create an heirloom that can be handed down from generation to generation," said Bridges. "Now, consumers can set the table for self-expression and claim a bold piece of design history."

Bridges in the past partnered with Wedgwood on an exclusive tabletop line.